

In Atlas Park

- "CityCenterFemaleStatue" "This statue commemorates the death of the mighty Atlas. He died on December 7th, 1941, the day of the German surprise attack on Paragon City. Atlas single-handedly prevented a large group of the advancing German soldiers from gaining a foothold beyond Independence Port. His brave sacrifice held the area until the Freedom Phalanx arrived and drove back the invaders."
- "AxisAttack1" "On this spot the titanic hero Atlas was posthumously awarded a key to the city, for his many valiant efforts on behalf of its citizens."
- "CitizenCrimeAct1" "In 1937, this park was host to many a candlelight vigil in support of Maiden Justice, who was facing down a civil suit brought by some thugs she had apprehended, who claimed her actions were illegal. Citizens from around the city would gather here in support of the proposed Citizen Crime Fighting Act. The candles symbolized the heroes of the city, those bright lights who beat away the darkness."
- "CitizenCrimeAct2" "On January 6th, 1937, Maiden Justice of the Freedom Phalanx arrested a group of violent thugs at this location. Although Maiden Justice was able to prevent the thugs from torching the building, the perpetrators were released by police on the grounds that the arrest had not been legally sanctioned. The public outcry was immediate. Politicians put their heads together, and the Citizen Crime Fighting Act was born."
- "MightForRightAct1" "This statue honors Georgia Reynolds, one of the first heroes to publicly challenge the Might for Right Act. Although she fought the conscription of heroes under this act, she later joined the armed forces and performed many services for her country under the code name Nimbus. She is best remembered for her service during the Rikti War, when she and the rest of Alpha Team assaulted the Rikti's entrenched positions, buying Omega Team time to sneak into the Rikti barracks and enter the portal to the Rikti homeworld."
- "PsychicFeedbackLoop1" "The warehouse you see before you was instrumental in the Lost's plan to psychically dominate the city. After the Grimm Fairy apprehended the group's ringleader, Ishmael, she discovered that the Lost had kept many citizens imprisoned here for months in order to practice their mental techniques on live subjects. Horrified, the Grimm Fairy appealed for help to the Freedom Phalanx, and Positron dispatched a Task Force to rescue the imprisoned civilians."
- "Hollowing1" "On this site, the Trolls Task Force was formed in response to the devastating event known as the Hollowing. Police Chief James Wilson said 'The police department will not stop until the residents of Eastgate can go home again.'"
- "AP_Data1" "According to recent findings, time travel is not only possible, it is a documented fact. A temporal anomaly has been detected off the coast of Paragon City, in the area known as the Rogue Isles. Due to the hostile nature of the area, DATA has been unable to investigate further."
- "AP_Data2" "In June 1989, DATA scientists observed a large meteor shower. The scientists recorded several anomalies. The meteors were of unusual size, and many of the larger fragments gave off a strange radiant energy. Sadly, none of these fragments have been recovered for study."

- "AP_Magi1" "These hands were all that was left of the ancient archmage Tarixus after he attempted a great spell that split the earth and swallowed him alive. To this day, no one is sure what his aim was, only that it resulted in his quick demise."
- "AP_Magi2" "These bones were recovered near Giza in 1887. After a brief stint in the British Museum, they were moved to Paragon City. It has been observed that the bones' location is not insignificant. While they were housed in the British Museum, several murders were committed in the area, the work of a monster known only as 'Jack the Ripper.' Immediately after they were moved to Paragon City and put under the wards of MAGI, the crimes ceased."
- "AP_Magi3" "This crystal is home to the genie Arabella, a creature possessed of unique and wondrous powers. It is said that where the crystal rests, there power lingers."
- "AP_Magi4" "Contained within this chest are several shards of material recovered from the ocean floor. Their exact origins are unknown, but preliminary scans have shown that the material is organic. It may even be intelligent."
- "AP_Magi5" "This pot contains water from the Well of the Furies. Its effects have not been adequately studied, for most of MAGI's mystics are far too intelligent to try."

In Galaxy City

- "GalaxyFemaleStatue" "Kelly Graham never thought she was destined for greatness. That changed one night when she was walking home from her job in the Crey secretarial pool. She came upon an innocent woman being dragged into an alley by some masked men. Kelly called out for help, to no avail. As her fear and anger grew, she launched herself toward the alley. After a blur of flying, energy blasting, and healing light... Galaxy Girl was born!"
- "AxisAttack2" "On this street in 1939, a parade was held to honor the hero Atlas. Though Atlas' nemesis, the Teal Serpent, tried to interrupt the festivities with a poison gas bomb, Atlas saved the spectators by scooping them up to sit on his mighty shoulders, far above the fumes. After getting the citizens to safety, Atlas sought out the Teal Serpent and defeated him. It is unknown whether the Serpent survived."
- "CitizenCrimeAct3" "In June 1937, City Councilman Kyle Legretsky held a press conference here to pledge his support for Maiden Justice and the Citizen Crime Fighting Act. He said, 'The heroes of this town are not the enemies of the people. They are our friends, our fathers, and our wives. They have earned our trust time and time again; it is only fitting that this trust be echoed in our laws.'"
- "MightForRightAct2" "In 1967, these streets were filled with protestors railing against the Might For Right Act. The country had united behind the cause of three African-American heroes, who claimed that the CIA was discriminating against minorities by targeting them for conscription."
- "MightForRightAct3" "Roger Vrabel of the CIA appeared on this spot to speak in favor of the Might For Right Act in 1967. He said, 'The heroes of this country are our most valuable natural resource. Without their service, we cannot hope to overcome the foes that assail us.' Although Vrabel spoke with conviction and passion, the act was overturned later that same year."

- "PsychicFeedbackLoop2" "After the arrest of Ishmael, the Lost Pariah who tried to psychically control the city, heroes traced a large portion of his operation to this warehouse. Here they found a map of the city with several critical pieces of infrastructure marked. It seems that if Ishmael's attempt was successful, his mind-controlled minions would have bent sent to tear apart their own city."

In Kings Row

- "AxisAttack3" "On July 12, 1932, this apartment building caught fire. Although fire fighters evacuated the residents, they were unable to contain the blaze. If not for the mighty hero Atlas, the entire neighborhood might have been lost. He arrived in time to clap out the flames with his massive hands."
- "AxisAttack4" "The building that used to stand in this spot was destroyed by the archvillain known only as the Teal Serpent. While Statesman battled the Serpent in an epic battle that ranged for miles, the monumental Atlas turned his attention to the people trapped inside the rubble. With a gentleness to rival his strength, he picked apart the ruins with his massive fingers, freeing 243 people who would otherwise have perished."
- "PsychicFeedbackLoop3" "This tenement used to be the home of a man named Isaac Waters, before he became a member of the mysterious Lost. Calling himself Ishmael, he rose to a position of distinction within the Lost, and spearheaded one of their boldest campaigns yet-- an attempt to enslave the minds of the city's populace."
- "PsychicFeedbackLoop4" "On this spot, a Lost Pariah named Ishmael was apprehended by a young heroine known as The Grimm Fairy. She had sensed Ishmael's attempts to enslave the minds of Paragon City's residents. Only by opening her mind ever so slightly to his control was she able to sense his location and thwart him at last."
- "PsychicFeedbackLoop5" "For months, unbeknownst to the city's finest Super Groups, a Lost Pariah called Ishmael attempted to psychically control the entire city. It was here that his efforts had the greatest effect, causing many citizens to run about in a stupor for hours on end."
- "GC_Magi1" "The blood of Mu shall rise, and it shall wash across the ocean and the land. The power that lies dormant within these humble rocks cannot remain so forever."
- "GC_Magi2" "Here lie the bones of the villain known as Ghost Widow. They contain barely a fragment of her spirit's power, which is currently under the study of MAGI's most powerful mystics."
- "GC_MAGI3" "This pillar records a Circle of Thorns prophecy. Regrettably, most of the text is indecipherable."

In Steel Canyon

- "WarOnDrugs1" "On this spot, the Back Alley Brawler formed his Super Group, the Regulators, in August of 1972. They were a group dedicated to wiping out the drug problems that had begun to ravage Paragon City's neighborhoods. The Brawler's friend Blue Steel coined their motto, 'That no power shall triumph over the human mind.'"

- "Superadine1" "This was the site of the first Superadine drug bust. Michael White, otherwise known as the Back Alley Brawler, was patrolling the area when he discovered a pair of thugs haggling over the strange green liquid. He arrested the villains, confiscated the drug, and brought it to the Freedom Phalanx for analysis. The Phalanx's top researcher, Dr. Brian Webb, confirmed the Brawler's worst fears: a new drug had been discovered, and its potency was unprecedented."
- "Superadine2" "This statue honors John Knox of the Midnight Squad, otherwise known as the Crimson Fist. Knox was among the many heroes to give their lives in the Rikti War, but he is best remembered for his efforts to keep Superadine off the streets. Using his powers of telepathy and divination, it was he who first linked the sale of Superadine to the Family."
- "HeroCorps1" "In January of 2003, Rebecca Foss and Hero Corps returned to Paragon City. Ms. Foss held a conference here to commemorate the opening of the company's new headquarters in Steel Canyon. She said, 'The world has been through hard times indeed. All our heroes are needed now, more than ever. And Hero Corps is needed as well.'"

In Skyway City

- "WarOnDrugs2" "This was the sight of one of the Regulators' first major victories in their War on Drugs. Led by the Back Alley Brawler, the Regulators surprised a group of thugs who were dealing in heavy narcotics. One of the villains, Harry Frost, later said, 'They may have got the best of me. But mark my words, my Family will rule this town.'"
- "WarOnDrugs3" "On this site, the Regulators and the Dawn Patrol first came together, joining forces to bring the Back Alley Brawler's War on Drugs to a conclusion. Unable to make a dent in crime by arresting petty thugs, they resolved to go after the drug problem at its root: the drug farms that produced the evil substances."
- "Superadine3" "This site marks the first known sighting of the strange creatures known colloquially as 'Trolls.' John Knox of the Midnight Squad was the first to observe these grotesque mutations. Afterward, he had this to say, 'I couldn't help but pity them. In a very real way, these are the people we're working to save.'"
- "HeroCorps2" "On this site in March of 1999, the hero Luminary gave a demonstration of his powers. Though public sentiment was against the fledgling company Hero Corps, Luminary was convinced he could turn that sentiment around. When he brought forth an aura of healing light, each person on the street felt touched. Still, some were unmoved. Eliza McCaffrey, one of the spectators remarked, 'Sure, his powers are amazing. That makes me all the more nervous that they're for sale!'"

In Talos Island

- "SpecialCouncil2" "After the devastating 1999 terrorist attack on the Midnight Squad, Rebecca Foss spoke here in favor of the creation of a United Nations

Special Council on Super Human Activities. She said, 'Paragon City has recently suffered a great loss. Someone must step up to take the reins. Hero Corps puts its faith firmly in the proposed U.N. council, and pledges to support all its actions.'"

- "FreedomPhalanx3" "When the Freedom Phalanx became the first legally recognized Super Group in 1953, a grand celebration was held at this site. Among the attendees was Vambrace, who said, 'I am humbled by the faith you have placed in myself and the Freedom Phalanx. Again and again, the people of this city remind me why it is a place worth fighting for.'"
- "SpankyRabinowitz2" "After his fourth re-election as mayor, 'Spanky' Rabinowitz threw an enormous gala in this meadow. Brightly colored tents dotted the grass, and the Paragon City Philharmonic turned out to play the event. It is rumored that such shady characters as Al Capone and Nathaniel Frost attended the event."
- "SpankyRabinowitz3" "Mayor 'Spanky' Rabinowitz was born on this very street, in 1878 to Aaron and Maria Rabinowitz. Those who knew the mayor well say that he often returned to this area when troubled, to walk the streets he grew up on and contemplate the city's future."
- "Ghostship1" "This plaque marks the first sighting of a mysterious ghostly vessel filled with a crew of gibbering spirits. Many people theorize that the vessel is Striga Isle's lost ship, the Moraine, which never returned to port after setting sail in the early 1930's. Some even believe that the crew is still trying to get home."

In Independence Port

- "SpecialCouncil1" "In January 2000, a ceremony was held at this site to celebrate the creation of the United Nations Special Council on Super Human Activities. Among the attendees was the Freedom Phalanx's Statesman, who said, 'The world has become too large for me to watch over alone. I am happy to welcome the United Nations to the battle.'"
- "FreedomPhalanx1" "When the Freedom Phalanx became the first legally recognized Super Group in 1953, Statesman held a conference at Valor Bridge. He said, 'The valiant hero Atlas died defending the city on this very bridge. I do not know how to thank you for your faith in the Freedom Phalanx, except to say that I, too, am ready to die in your defense.'"
- "FreedomPhalanx2" "In 1953, the Freedom Phalanx prevented a ship bearing copious amounts of explosives from docking at this harbor. When the captain was interrogated, it became clear that he was on a mission of sabotage. Public sentiment for the Freedom Phalanx swelled, and Mayor Kyle Legretsky proposed that the Citizens Crime Fighting Act be expanded. He proposed that groups such as the Freedom Phalanx be officially sanctioned fighting forces."
- "SpankyRabinowitz1" "In the 1920's, it was considered most unlucky not to have your ship christened by Mayor 'Spanky' Rabinowitz. His services were so greatly in demand that he was often to be found in the shipyard on a weekday afternoon, playing poker with the dock hands and awaiting the next opportunity to discharge his duties."

In Founders' Falls

- "RiktiWar1" "During the Rikti War, this dock was converted to an emergency shelter. One of the few places to survive the initial bombing, the area became a haven for people with no homes to return to. It also became a coordination nexus for the Vanguard, an umbrella organization designed to coordinate super-powered responses to the Rikti invaders. Though the Vanguard was formed only after the invasion began, it quickly became the only group with any cohesion, as smaller Super Groups were decimated and destroyed. Many of the critical plans for the resistance were relayed through this station, including the fateful Alpha and Omega Gambit."
- "DimensionalBarrier1" "On July 7, 1988, the brilliant Dr. Brian Webb, former researcher for Freedom Phalanx, held a surprise press conference at this site. He announced that he had discovered a way to enter other dimensions. He demonstrated his technology for the awed spectators, even transporting a few lucky reporters and dignitaries to an alternate world. Dr. Webb said, 'My technology has proven that possibility is truly limitless. The future is what we make of it.'"

In Brickstown

- "ZigExplanation" "Daniel Zigursky was a scientist who devoted his life to studying and understanding super powered beings and their abilities. The results of his work were instrumental the construction of the Zigursky Correctional Facility. 'The Zig', as it is referred to colloquially, was the first prison in the world capable of housing super powered criminals, and is still the best. It incorporates the latest advancements in magical charms, psionic barriers, energy absorption fields, and indestructible alloys to keep Paragon City safe now and into the future."
- "MashuBridgeExplanation" "In 1968, a large group of prisoners from The Zig attempted a daring escape. With help from The Earthworm, the prisoners dug an elaborate tunnel system; however, the high impact digging of The Earthworm triggered an earthquake that ravaged the city. The massive tunnel they had hollowed out collapsed leaving a chasm that divided the city and hindered recovery efforts. The powerful hero, Mashu the Mountain, built this bridge in a mere three hours to aid the citizens. Months later Mashu was vanquished while trying to capture Doppelganger, the last of the escaped inmates. Even after the damage was repaired and the chasm filled in, the citizens of Paragon City chose to leave this bridge standing in honor of Mashu's courage and sacrifice."
- "ProjectExplanation" "Hello, and welcome to Crey Urban Projects. Crey, a world leader in technology, has generously funded this low-cost, high-tech housing development as part of Crey's continuing efforts to support Paragon City. Crey: bringing the future to life."
- "MonorailExplanation" "This was once the site of the Crowman Monorail Station. It was destroyed by the crash landing of a drone ship during the Rikti invasion. The Rikti attack also resulted in the destruction of a nearby Crey laboratory. This made the next stop on the line, once known as Venice, uninhabitable. Due to that unfortunate event, there was no need to rebuild the station and this park was built in its stead."

- "DimensionalBarrier2" "This plaque commemorates the invasion of Paragon City by foes from an alternate dimension. In 1988, after Dr. Brian Webb smashed the dimensional barrier, it seemed that the future could only be bright, full of wonders and discoveries. But Dr. Webb had not considered the dangers his discoveries entailed. He paid for his oversight with his life, dying at the hands of a militant people from another world, who used his portal technology to invade our own. Only with the help of the Freedom Phalanx were the invaders repelled."
- "DimensionalBarrier3" "This building was once the lab of Dr. Brian Webb, the brilliant scientist who broke the dimensional barrier and opened up whole new worlds to science. His notes reveal that his findings were linked to previous scientists' research on the effects of the drug Superadine. Much has been made of this discovery, but the link between the drug and the dimensional barrier remains a mystery."

In Peregrine Island

- "NemesisSeizesControl1" "In 1945, six members of the Freedom Phalanx met on Peregrine Island to save the world. The clever Dr. Mnemonic had synthesized an antidote to the poison gas Nemesis had released across the country, but it had to be distributed quickly. With only minutes to spare, these six heroes took off across the country carrying large batches of the airborne antidote. They managed to get the antidote to each infected city, preventing a disaster of epic proportions."

In Perez Park

- "AxisAttack5" "Atlas' wife, Gloria Branson, planted this tree in 1941 in memory of her fallen husband. The first to respond to the German attack on Paragon City at Independence Port, Atlas died defending the city and the people he loved."
- "CitizenCrimeAct4" "On this spot, the first legally sanctioned hero arrest took place, on Sept. 12, 1937. Just two days after the passage of the Citizen Crime Fighting Act, the Freedom Phalanx's Dark Watcher apprehended a cult of demon worshippers in this glade, preventing the sacrifice of an innocent citizen."
- "CitizenCrimeAct5" "On the southern shore of Everett Lake, supporters of the Citizen Crime Fighting Act gathered to celebrate its passage in September 1937. Maiden Justice thanked the people for their support, saying, 'The Freedom Phalanx has always known that it was our responsibility to protect this city from evil-doers. But it is also something else: it is also a privilege.'"
- "MightForRightAct4" "On this spot, operatives from the CIA attempted to arrest Roger Washington, Georgia Reynolds, and Hakeem Muhammad, young African-American heroes who had refused to be drafted under the Might For Right Act. The operatives were shocked to find not just the three youths, but a whole battalion of heroes who had flocked to their cause. The battle over the Might For Right Act had begun."
- "PsychicFeedbackLoop6" "After the arrest of Ishmael, the Lost Pariah who tried to psychically dominate the city, Sister Psyche scanned the city for traces of psychic residue. The streets of Perez Park were determined to be a hotbed of such residue. Sister Psyche theorizes that this residue is fueling the territorial gang war that continues to plague these streets."

In The Hollows

- "Hollowing2" "This water treatment facility used to desalinate the water from Eastgate Bay for use by Paragon City citizens. In the wake of the Hollowing, the facility became unusable, creating a serious water crisis for post-war Paragon City."
- "Hollowing3" "Before the Hollowing this spot, known as Lookout Point, was a favorite destination for lovers on a midnight stroll. Now, it is a vantage point from which heroes keep their eyes on the mystical antics of the Circle of Thorns."
- "Hollowing4" "During the Hollowing, many buildings in this area collapsed. If not for the rapid response of several heroes, led by the valiant Luminary, many of Eastgate's residents would have been buried under the rubble. Luminary and her companions managed to save 437 lives on that devastating day, guaranteeing them a place in Paragon City's history."
- "Hollowing5" "This building once housed the lab of Dr. Calvin Stewart, who pioneered Eastgate Bay's Seaview project. Since the Hollowing, Dr. Stewart has been forced to abandon the lab, and communication with the Seaview project has been erratic. Very little is known by the public about the scientists' activities in Eastgate Bay."

In Boomtown

- "WarOnDrugs4" "It was here that the Back Alley Brawler arrested Harry Frost for the second time. Frost was peddling a strange substance to a group of street thugs. After a lengthy court battle, the charges stuck. It seemed that the War on Drugs had achieved a critical victory."
- "Superadine4" "In March of 1986, with the mystical aid of the Midnight Squad, the Back Alley Brawler managed to track local Superadine distribution to a secret lab beneath this building. Little is known about the lab's contents. It is simply known that the Back Alley Brawler and the Statesman swore their comrades to secrecy after the battle."
- "HeroCorps3" "This building was the site of the first clash between Hero Corps and the Freedom Phalanx. Determined to prove their worth to a doubtful public, Hero Corps had begun investigating the activities of an archvillain known as the Jade Maiden. In February of 1999, Luminary and his comrades in Hero Corps arrived here to arrest the villain, only to discover that the Freedom Phalanx was already on the trail. In the confusion that ensued, the Jade Maiden escaped."
- "HeroCorps4" "This plaque commemorates a massive protest held in opposition to the construction of Hero Corps headquarters. Among the protesters were a number of heroes, including Justin Greene, known in combat as Green Justice, and his mentor and friend, Hero 1. Mr. Greene summed up the protester's sentiments with the following statement, 'How can the people of this city trust heroes who work for money? When you put your life in another man's hands, you have to know that he's helping you because he wants to. You have to know that his heart is really in it.'"
- "HeroCorps5" "After the destruction of Hero Corps' first Paragon City office, the company planned to rebuild their headquarters here. But public sentiment could not have been more firmly set against them. Despite the patronage of Countess Crey, this site remained vacant, and in October 1999 Hero Corps was forced to move on to another city."

In Dark Astoria

- "SpecialCouncil3" "This tomb houses the remains of several members of the Midnight Squad, who were murdered during a sneak attack on their secret Terra Volta facility. It was this action that prompted the creation of the United Nations Special Council on Super Human Activities."
- "FreedomPhalanx4" "When the Freedom Phalanx became an officially recognized Super Group in 1953, the hero Vambrace made a pledge. 'Dark Astoria will be restored to its natural state,' he said. 'The Freedom Phalanx is committed to saving every part of Paragon City, even those that may seem lost.'"
- "SpankyRabinowitz4" "Though the details remain unclear, it is rumored that Mayor 'Spanky' Rabinowitz often met with Nathaniel Frost here. Some historians have theorized that Frost paid Spanky to keep the police from investigating the Frost crime ring. Others have posited that Spanky paid Frost to keep the crime ring's activities from becoming violent. The real purpose of these visits may never be known."
- "SpankyRabinowitz5" "While Mayor 'Spanky' Rabinowitz was no paragon of virtue, it cannot be argued that Paragon City prospered under his guidance. Historians cannot account for this. Some have theorized that Spanky had some sort of mystical power on his side; it has even been theorized that he sold his soul to a demon in exchange for the city's well-being. After his death, a number of old relics were found in a secret compartment in his private office, including a map of Dark Astoria."

In Striga Isle

- "Ghostship2" "In 1932, the wives of the sailors on the good ship Moraine would gather on this little island. In the shadow of the lighthouse, they would wait, sometimes all night, for any sign of their husbands' homecoming."
- "Ghostship3" "This tomb honors the sailors lost on the oil tanker Moraine, which set sail in 1932 and was never heard from again. Rumors indicate that the tanker was being used to smuggle ne'er-de-wells onto Striga Isle. It has been theorized that these illicit passengers caused the ship's sinking."
- "Ghostship4" "In 1932, an oil tanker known as the Moraine set off from this point. It was expected to remain at sea for several weeks; however, to this day, no one on Striga Isle has seen any sign of it."
- "Ghostship5" "In 1932, the oil tanker Moraine was first launched from this site. Many people have claimed that the ship's misfortune was due to Captain Renyard Kale failing to ask Mayor Spanky Rabinowitz to christen the ship on its first voyage."

In Crey's Folly

- "RiktiWar2" "This plaque commemorates the last meeting of Statesman and Hero 1. They were the heroes slated to lead the Alpha and Omega Teams, and they knew they would probably not meet again. 'We only had a minute to say goodbye,' Statesman said later. 'So we didn't say anything.' Although Statesman survived Alpha Team's strike on the entrenched Rikti troops, Hero 1 and Omega Team never returned from the Rikti dimension."

- "RiktiWar3" "In 2000, when the Rikti struck, they immediately disabled the Paragon Water Works. Without the efforts of the heroes Synapse and Positron, many of those who survived the initial attack would have died of thirst in the weeks to come. Positron devised an ingenious method of desalinating the water of Eastgate Bay, and Synapse put it into action in record time, saving hundreds of lives."

In The Sewers

- "NemesisSeizesControl3" "In 1945, the Freedom Phalanx was determined to thwart Nemesis' campaign to wrest control of the U.S. Paragon City was one of the many major metropolises Nemesis had infected with his strange poison gas. The hero known as the Dark Watcher knew that he had to find the source of the gas. Using his powers of extra-sensory perception, the Dark Watcher journeyed into the bowels of the city. Here, in the sewer network, he found storage tanks full of the gas, slowly leaking their noxious fumes into Paragon City's environment. The Dark Watcher disposed of the gas, making it possible for the city to be cured."

In Faultline

- "WarOnDrugs5" "This plaque commemorates the death of Mina Horne, known to her comrades as the Illustrated Woman. She was killed when the Frost drug cartel, otherwise known as the Family, ambushed the Regulators as revenge for the brief imprisonment of Harry Frost. At her funeral, a shaken Back Alley Brawler said, 'Mina was a person who believed in the human spirit. We can best honor her by living the life she fought for.'"
- "Superadine5" "In late 1982, the Back Alley Brawler and his Regulators were trying to mop up the last traces of Superadine on the city streets. A tip led them to this building, a front company for the Family. During the raid Harry Frost, the Family's leader, was accidentally killed, leaving his young son Sebastian to oversee his business. Since then, Superadine sales have inexplicably increased, despite the best efforts of the Brawler and his comrades."
- "HeroCorps6" "In May of 1999, following the destruction of Hero Corps' original Paragon City headquarters, Countess Crey held a conference at this site to announce her sponsorship of the ill-fated company. She joined hands with Rebecca Foss, Hero Corps' founder, and said, 'A new world of heroes is upon us. Crey Technologies will not be left behind.'"
- "HeroCorps7" "This plaque marks the site of the original Hero Corps headquarters, which was destroyed by a gang of mysterious soldiers clad in power armor. Although Hero Corps' employees made it out alive, Hero Corps was devastated by the loss. Its founder, Rebecca Foss, spoke tearfully the next morning on the radio program 'Wake Up Paragons.' 'Who could hate us so much?' she asked, 'We only want to help!'"

In Terra Volta

- "SpecialCouncil4" "In the late 1990's, super-powered mercenary groups had become active all over the world. The situation had clearly gotten out of hand, but it was a mercenary activity right here in Paragon City that spurred the creation of the U.N. Special Council of Super Human Activities. Late one night in September of 1999, 6 super-powered mercenaries slipped into this factory complex and made off with several canisters of lethal gas, a byproduct of the factory's machinery. The Freedom Phalanx bested several of the mercenaries, but they were too late to stop one of the villains from getting away with the gas. Aghast, the city waited and watched. Something bad was about to happen. But nobody knew what. "
- "SpecialCouncil5" "In the late 1990's, super-powered mercenary groups had become active all over the world. The situation had clearly gotten out of hand, but it was a mercenary activity right here in Paragon City that spurred the creation of the U.N. Special Council of Super Human Activities. In September 1999, super-powered mercenaries stole poisonous gas from a Terra Volta factory. Days later, they struck. They attacked the complex that once rested on this site, gassing the people within. When the Freedom Phalanx investigated, it was discovered that the facility had been a front for an undercover Midnight Squad operation. Several of the Squad's more secretive researchers had been living in this facility, under the belief that this subterfuge would keep them safe. Forty-seven men and women died in the attack; to this day, no one knows who the perpetrators were."
- "FreedomPhalanx5" "In 1953, citizens poured into the streets in support of the Freedom Phalanx becoming a legally recognized Super Group. The workers of Terra Volta were particularly adamant in their support, having witnessed many villainous activities over the past few decades. Each night, when the factory whistles blew, a shout would go up across the zone, echoing in the evening air: 'Freedom Phalanx! Freedom Phalanx!'"
- "SpankyRabinowitz6" "Years after his death, many of Mayor 'Spanky' Rabinowitz's secret dealings were still coming to light. Though his heirs have yet to piece together the entire picture, it seems that Spanky had money secretly invested in numerous businesses within Paragon City, including this factory. His heirs cannot quite account for the money's origin."

Eden

- "RiktiWar4" "In 2000, Woodvale was still a pleasant neighborhood where families picnicked with their children and where Synapse liked to jog. When the Rikti invaders struck, Synapse's first act was to use his super speed to carry as many people out of the area as possible. Though he regretted not being able to join his comrades in battle, he managed to save 87 lives that day before the fire from Rikti plasma weapons tore Woodvale apart."
- "RiktiWar5" "This plaque commemorates the death of Galaxy Girl, who fell in the first battle with the Rikti. When it became obvious that the heroes would have to fall back, Galaxy Girl insisted that she be the last to retreat. Remaining on the front lines, she used her healing light to save the lives of many of her retreating comrades. Witnesses say that she used her last bit of strength to heal her friend Ms. Liberty, rather than to save herself."

In the Rikti Crash Site

- "NemesisSeizesControl2" "On this site, Statesman and Maiden Justice battled a horde of Nemesis' strange steam-powered robots. The robots' fatal flaw was their inability to adapt to new situations; once events started to transpire differently than Nemesis had envisioned, the robots were next to useless. Maiden Justice used her cunning to confound the robots, while Statesman relied on his awesome strength. In the end, they had defeated some six hundred robots, freeing Paragon City from Nemesis' grasp."
